GREG HAIGHT

Greg Haight graduated from Georgetown University Law School and is a member of the Bars of Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia. After law school he accepted a position with the DC Law Firm of Gosnell Durkin and Capello a firm specializing in Tax and Finance. After practicing with that firm for 2-years Mr. Haight was appointed assistant Commonwealth Attorney for Arlington County Virginia where he served for 8-years. After leaving the Commonwealth Attorney's office he entered private practice with the law firm Haight, Tramonte where he practiced for 30-years. During his tenure there he handled hundreds of financial transactions in the sale and purchase of real estate. During this time he also served with the team which created Navy Cash a system which uses an electronic purse to replace currency aboard ship. Over the years he has tried many cases involving financial matters, banking issues. Currently he is advising a corporation that obtains business loans for small businesses which do not qualify for bank loans. He's knowledgeable about cryptocurrencies and the workings of blockchains.
