Chicago, IL Office

Mitchell H. Frazen has a national reputation for evaluating, defending and settling complex wrongful death and catastrophic personal injury cases.

Mitch's clients turn to him with difficult and dangerous cases, many involving sympathetic plaintiffs and high damages exposure. He uses his 43 years of trial experience to provide frank and thoughtful evaluations, with effective strategies for defense or resolution. Mitch is regularly called on to provide insurer clients with "second opinions" of case valuations by other counsel.

Mitch defends healthcare professionals, contractors, manufacturers, nursing facilities, homeowner associations, churches, and other nonprofit organizations against all types of personal injury claims; including catastrophic injury and death, sexual torts, products, premises, construction defect and professional liability actions. He also has represented insurers in general liability and excess and surplus lines coverage litigation.

Mitch has tried jury cases to verdict in eight different state and federal courts, and he has argued appeals before the Illinois Court of Appeals, the Illinois Supreme Court and two United States Courts of Appeal.

A founding partner of Litchfield Cavo LLP, Mitch served on its Executive Committee, acted as its General Counsel, and is currently a member of its Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Committee.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

MISSOURI CLAYTONJOE JACOBSON

A lawyer in St. Louis, Joe Jacobson handles general and business litigation and appeals. Joe has tried more than 65 cases to judgment and was the sole or lead lawyer in over 100 appeals. His cases involve subjects as diverse as patent validity and infringement, the taking of private property by for-profit corporations, a union's duty of fair representation, a farmer's right to divert surface waters, defending Chuck Berry in a lawsuit by his former pianist for copyright infringement (Chuck won), and as routine as breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, unfair competition, and fraud.

Joe represents both plaintiffs and defendants, and represents in litigation and transactions such diverse clients as automobile dealers, real estate developers, airline pilots, Indian tribes, energy companies, construction contractors, and individuals who have been defrauded, crashed, blown up and burned, sexually harassed, discriminated against, deprived of commissions, misdiagnosed, mistreated, and falsely charged with dishonest conduct. Joe has helped multiple clients obtain seven-figure judgments for actual or punitive damages, or both.

Joe also prosecutes and defends class actions (trying five to judgment) and has recovered almost $600 million for plaintiff classes.

Give him a call.
